Selecting and Electing a Pastor Nominating Committee (PNC)

The current Nominating Committee of Fourth Church — which was most recently charged with presenting the slate of officer candidates elected at our Annual Meeting — holds responsibility for accepting nominations for the Pastor Nominating Committee, reviewing the recommendations, and presenting a slate to the congregation for a vote to approve the PNC.

That committee received nominations from the congregation during March (with a deadline of April 7, 2024). All members of Fourth Church were invited to submit a recommendation for the PNC — on behalf of others or themselves.

The Nominating Committee then reviewed all recommendations and confidentially deliberated to prepare the slate being presented today for a congregational vote.

In doing so, the Nominating Committee prayerfully discerned how to best match the needs of the PNC with the individuals recommended and the church's long-range plans. Today the Nominating Committee puts forth a group of nominees with a breadth and depth of personal, professional, and spiritual experience necessary to represent on the PNC the rich and diverse perspectives of our community.

About the Pastor Nominating Committee

As defined by the Presbyterian Church (USA), a Pastor Nominating Committee represents and is elected by the whole congregation. This committee has the ultimate responsibility for nominating a minister to the congregation for election as the next pastor.

In fulfillment of that role, over a number of months, the PNC works through the pastoral search process, listening for the call of Christ and “participating in God’s own choice” for our next pastor.

Requirements and Expectations of PNC Members

Members of the PNC must be active members of Fourth Church for at least one year, demonstrate faithful participation in both worship and the life of our church, and support the ministry and mission of Fourth Church through financial stewardship by pledging.

The 2023–2024 Nominating Committee: Dennis Canfield, Rhonda Faulkner, Joe Fong, Elizabeth Foster, Jenny Giblin (Chair), Laura Lee Larson, Jerry Latherow, Maggie McGuire, Larry Nicholson, Emma Richardson, and Ken Walker.
